27 Employees Selected for 2019-20 Academic Leadership Institute

A total of 27 UA employees have been selected to participate in the 2019-20 Academic Leadership Institute [1], a yearlong program designed to build the capacity of current and future University leaders.

ALI is a partnership between the Office of the Provost [2] and the Division of Human Resources [3], under the co-direction of Andrea Romero, vice provost for faculty affairs, and Helena Rodrigues, interim chief human resources officer and associate vice president for human resources.

The cohort is selected through a competitive application process, which looks at leadership potential, commitment to diversity and inclusion, and interest in enhancing the whole of the University community. More than 100 applicants are evaluated each year by the ALI advisory board.

The program consists of: six all-day immersive sessions focusing on topics such as discovering personal leadership styles, building diverse teams, complex problem-solving strategies and improving organizational effectiveness; three half-day sessions, focused on building engagement around upcoming strategic initiatives at the UA; and ongoing leadership coaching individualized for each participant, which will be provided by the Office of Leadership and Organizational Development [1].

The 2019-20 ALI program will be led by PatternShifts [4], a consulting company based in Austin, Texas. The company's three partners [5] will facilitate the sessions. Their mission is to help UA develop transformational leaders by blending adult learning methodologies with the latest research in the neuroscience of leadership and experiential-based design theories.

"PatternShifts has a strong background in leadership development, and carefully tailored their content to create high-impact programming specifically designed to address UA leaders and their challenges," said Julie Forster, leadership advisor and senior organizational development consultant in the Office of Leadership and Organizational Development.

Incoming ALI fellow Mario Leon [6], a UA Police Department lieutenant, said he saw ALI as an opportunity to meet other campus leaders and promote UAPD's mission to serve the community.

"The collaborative setting of the program is ideal for information sharing, and there is a lot to learn from different professionals and their perspectives on leadership," Leon said. "The program will expand my knowledge of planning, problem solving and organizational effectiveness" as well as the unique aspects of working at a higher education institution.
Another fellow, Hao Helen Zhang, is a professor in the Department of Mathematics and the Statistics and Data Science Graduate Interdisciplinary Program. While she's gained leadership skills through colleagues and lessons in daily practice, she said the program will provide her with systematic leadership training and development.

"Through my participation in the program, I hope to improve my leadership capabilities and effectiveness and hence better serve the community and the university," she said.

She added that "women and minority leaders still face many challenges today, and I hope to learn how to cope with those unique challenges and build confidence from the program."
