University Libraries Launch New Online Search Tool on July 20

Date:
July 23, 2018

On July 20, the University Libraries [1] updated the current library catalog and Summon search tool with a new system [2] to help you find and get what you need. This cloud-based system is part of a tri-university collaboration with the University of Arizona, Arizona State University and Northern Arizona University to support greater fiscal responsibility and operational efficiency.

What's changing?

- We'll automatically renew your books for you, unless there's a hold on the book or your account isn't in good standing.
- You'll now have more time ? 10 days instead of seven ? to pick up materials on hold.
- We aren't charging hourly/daily late fees for most library materials anymore, but we'll continue to have full replacement charges and processing fees for materials that aren't returned by the due date.
- We're replacing print receipts with email receipts, and you can still track due dates by logging into your library account.

What's staying the same?

- Immediately access electronic databases, online journals and ebooks.
- Search for library resources from a single search box.
- Do advanced searches.
- See materials that are available in real-time.
- Keep materials for the same amount of time as before.
- Request items that we don’t have.
- Pay fees and fines online.

If you can’t find what you need, contact your librarian [3] or ask us [4].

Source URL: https://uaatwork.arizona.edu/uannounce/university-libraries-launch-new-online-search-tool-july-20

Links:
[3] http://new.library.arizona.edu/about/contact/your-librarian